Not only has Stanford been a national collegiate force in basketball, but Cardinal players have been a part of several U.S. National teams and their success.

Four former Stanford players have played in the Olympics. Ron Tomsic (1952-55) and Jim Walsh (1950-52) were members of the gold medal winning 1956 U.S. Olympic team. That team included Bill Russell and K.C. Jones. Tomsic averaged 11.1 ppg in eight games (team's #3 scorer), while Walsh averaged 9.1 ppg in eight games. Walsh scored 14 points in the gold medal winning 89-55 victory over Russia. Carlos Bea (1954-56) was the starting center on the Cuban Olympic team at the Helsinki Games in 1952. Jacobsen was a member of the silver medal winning West team at the 1998 USA Basketball Men's Youth Development Festival.

Montgomery was the head coach of the 1996 USA Men's 22-and-Under Select team by the USA Basketball Men's Collegiate Committee. Montgomery previously served USA Basketball as an assistant coach for the 1994 Men's Junior World Championship Qualifying Team that won the gold medal with an 8-0 record.

"It was a tremendous honor to be selected to represent the United States," said Montgomery. "And it was also a tremendous opportunity and challenge to be able to work with the best basketball players in the United States."

Under Montgomery's direction, the U.S. 22-and-Under team captured the gold medal at the 1996 COPABA Men's-and-Under World Championship Qualifying Tournament in Puerto Rico. For his efforts, Montgomery was named 1996 USA Basketball Development Coach of the Year.
